

Lexmark can design a cartridge to work perfectly with their printer without adding an electronic chip. The primary purpose of the chip was to claim a copyright to prevent remanufacturing of their cartridge and thus eliminate competition. This was never the intent or purpose of Copyright laws.
Martin Melnick